Brian Woolfall is Senior Counsel in Tyson & Mendes' San Diego office. His practice focuses on litigating complex construction defect and property damage claims on behalf of developers, general contractors, and subcontractors along with our construction defect litigation team. Mr. Woolfall also has also litigated cases involving personal injury, products liability, unfair business practices, and antitrust violations over nearly 25 years of experience.

Mr. Woolfall has successfully defended claims made with respect to hundreds of single-family homes, large apartment communities, mid-rise and high-rise condominiums, as well as mixed-use and commercial properties. In one case, Mr. Woolfall was able to dispose of a class action claim in its entirety by opposing plaintiffs' motion for class certification, forcing the dismissal of what would have been a multimillion-dollar action with the potential to impact the construction industry throughout California. He also spent seven years representing homeowners in construction defect cases, which broadened his perspective and enhanced his ability to aggressively defend his clients.

Mr. Woolfall obtained his J.D. from California Western School of Law in 1994, where he served on Law Review and graduated near the top of his class. He obtained his B.B.A. from Baylor University, majoring in marketing with an additional focus on quantitative business analysis.

In his free time, Mr. Woolfall enjoys traveling and spending time with his family, including his wife, daughter, grandkids, and dogs.
