📍 Los Angeles, CA

Samuel Frasher is an Associate in Tyson & Mendes' Los Angeles office. His practice focuses on complex multi-party litigation and general liability matters.

Before joining the firm, Mr. Frasher worked at a preeminent Los Angeles law firm, where his practice was balanced between insurance coverage litigation and personal injury litigation. During that time, he authored numerous appellate briefs in state and federal court. Mr. Frasher approaches each matter with a well-developed sensitivity to the priorities, issues, and objectives of the client. He is admitted to practice law in California and Wisconsin.

Mr. Frasher earned his law degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. While in law school, he served as an editor for the Wisconsin Journal of Law, Gender, and Society and as a research assistant for two professors. Mr. Frasher earned his undergraduate degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in History and Legal Studies.

When Mr. Frasher is not actively representing his clients and their interests, he enjoys being active himself. He enjoys running, trying new restaurants, cheering for Wisconsin sports teams, and spending time with his golden retriever.
