Svetlana “Lana” Volkova is an Associate in Tyson & Mendes’ San Diego office.

Ms. Volkova has extensive litigation experience in personal injury law. She is passionate about fighting for justice and defending the American dream of local and national businesses. Ms. Volkova has a diverse background, including not only personal injury law, but also real estate law, business law, and tax law. Recently, Ms. Volkova was part of a successful multi-billion-dollar complex litigation team for a class action lawsuit representing one of the largest cities and counties in California against Big Pharma that won a landmark bench trial. The verdict held opioid manufacturers and distributors accountable for their actions in creating and prolonging the devastating opioid epidemic. Ms. Volkova enjoys using her language skills in law to make the American dream possible for foreign businesses. One of her big wins was when a foreign corporation sought legal services when it was sued for breach of contract. In addition to working as an attorney, Ms. Volkova is a real estate broker and has helped her clients make millions of dollars in real estate investments.

Ms. Volkova obtained her J.D. from California Western School of Law. She also obtained her B.A. from the University of Oregon in Romance Languages: Spanish/French with a minor in Business Administration. Ms. Volkova graduated magna cum laude and was a recipient of the Diversity Excellence Scholarship as well as a member of Golden Key International Honor Society. Currently, Ms. Volkova serves as the secretary of the Real Property Law Executive Committee and the chair of the Diversity Committee for California Lawyers Association.
